Laura Bray

Director, Executive Office

Laura Bray is the director of the executive office of the Home Builders Institute. Laura, one of HBI's most tenured employees with more than 35 years of service, possesses institutional knowledge of HBI that lends insightful perspective to the executive team and staff.

Laura has served three CEOs, working with each on a wide range of programs including assisting state and local Home Builder Associations, seeking to advance and enrich the education, training and placement of men and women in careers serving the workforce needs of the residential building industry.

Laura serves as the primary contact for the HBI Board of Trustees and manages all aspects of board meetings, special meetings and other events involving board members. Laura also serves as HBI's corporate secretary and is responsible for managing the official records for HBI.

Laura works directly with National Association of Home Builders (NAHB) senior staff and acts as liaison between HBI and NAHB with regard to lease issues, maintenance and property management.

Laura earned an associate degree in science from Northern Virginia Community College and has spent many enjoyable hours attending software training classes. Her guilty pleasure is golf, and she has twice competed in the National Championships of the Executive Women's Golf Association.
